

Conflict, democracy and listening, 26 September, Melbourne
Museum
Convenor: Mark Gibson

This workshop was held in partnership with the Bunjilaka Aboriginal Cultural Centre at Melbourne Museum, and researchers from the Museum as well as 17 others from some ten Australian universities. The workshop followed the similar open format to others in the program, with contributors responding to a set of prepared questions and readings.

This again proved successful, with valuable cross-disciplinary exchanges between cultural studies, history, conflict resolution theory and museology, as well as between scholarly and practitioner perspectives.
